Company Presentation

Dear Sirs,

please find below our company profile including a description, a brochure concerning our business and some of our main works.

Arredo Uno srl is a furniture manufacturing company located in Portomaggiore, Ferrara.

Our 5600 sqm headquarter includes a technical office for the development of executive planning and designs, admin and commercial offices designated to follow the projects in and out of the company, a carpentry and painting department as well as a warehouse.

Since 1985 we focused our specialisation in the custom made furniture industry for restaurants, cafes and bars, self service restaurants, hotels, boutiques and luxurious residences.

Our company can count on highly skilled technical and artisans' teams who passionately engage them selves in the research of functional and modern solutions.

Our focus is our customers' satisfaction, reached through the research of new materials and new technologies.

We work together with other companies, with architects and interior designers who entrust our tech office for the development of their projects. We can manage a whole supply chain and this enables us to deal directly with the customers and with any part of the furniture's process, from designing to assembling.

Our company is in partnership with Mi.da 2000 srl. With its 900sqm, Mida is a high precision furniture carpentry company specialised in steel, iron and brass working suitable for furniture and mechanical elements.

To be your partner would mean to be so right away.

Thank you in advance for your attention. We look forward to be in contact with you hoping for the beginning of a new collaboration.

Kind Regards, Baraldi Alessandro e Bonora Gianluca

CASEHISTORY

When tailor made is an easy win for style and top class furniture

In Portomaggiore di Ferrara, Arredo Uno is the ideal supplier for the management of the entire design concept for some of the most well-known chains in catering and clothing

The digital revolution is very quickly modifying our lifestyle and approach to purchasing and consuming. In this scenario the risk is that the gap between industry 4.0, leading technology and the real world continues to grow.

Bridging the gap is Arredo Uno, a company which makes practicality and tailored manual skill its true raison d'être, so much so that it has proven itself as supplier for furniture for some of the most well-known national and international contractors starting with a few restaurant chains like McDonald's or Camst - for whom they are curating a complete restyling of many restaurants all across Italy, in prestigious locations like the Museo di Palazzo Massimo in Roma or the Teatro dell'Opera in Firenze - or clothing chains like Pinco Boutique.

In short, a proper big player in 'turnkeys' furniture. And the Dna of the company founded in Portomaggiore di Ferrara is still profoundly artisan and fuelled by the great passion of partners Alessandro Baraldi and Gianluca Bonora, so much so that, still today, the base work is truly "tailor made," with products made carefully by hand, with dedication and precise tailoring and thousands of innovative ideas. But at the basis of everything is the ability for industrial production. And, at the end of it all, these are the ingredients making up the success of Arredo Uno. "Let's start with the premise - says the manager and partner Gianluca Bonora - that today, shop furniture, like that of a large restaurant chain, or a hotel, or bar, must have the right potential for communication to speak to a public which is prevalently young, informed, and therefore knows what they want, and what they are looking for. The furniture is, in short, the main visual language and must be able to welcome patrons and make them feel comfortable right away and connected to the product they are looking for. These might seem like complex parameters, but after all, this is what a tailor used to do with a nice item of clothing: creating the image of the persons wearing it and transmitting a precise message of their interests and personal taste. This is exactly what needs to happen when people walk in to one of the places that we design and furnish."

To understand what the ingredients to the success of Arredo Uno are, we need to step into a new visual language, capable of intercepting and making new

Arredo Uno presents a completely new visual language with dedication, great care, passion and handcrafted quality to create bespoke designs for national and international contractors marketing tools their own and then sharing them with the client. The rest is done through their great skill at personalising the model based on the technical and aesthetic needs of the client. "We always work on the basis of personalised configuration in correlation with the requirements and specific needs of our clients. The next step - explains the other partner and manager of Arredo Uno, Alessandro Baraldi - is the study and design of the correct working spaces by our technical office and at that point, after having defined the type of environment and studied the various marketing aspects connected to the contractor, we begin the proper artisan work, completely carried out by our master craftsmen, capable of following the project through to the end and installation, 'turnkey'. Indeed, our company studies and creates the furniture, finishes, finishing, and systems. In short, we prepare everything needed to truly make the space function at its best."

Each project studied, designed and created by Arredo Uno is, therefore, a unique product with guaranteed high quality. These are the characteristics of a company which has made excellence its narrative and has become privileged partner of large businesses, architects and some of the most famous national and international contractors.

This success will soon have repercussions on the productive platform as well, so much so that, recently, they have undertaken a large development project centred on doubling company spaces. Growth which has now become necessary to allow Arredo Uno to expand its focus even more on new services and products and thereby intercept new styles and construction trends and an expanding market.
